

A photograph of a white sheet hanging on a clothesline in front of a window with green shutters. The sheet is the central focus, with the window and shutters visible in the background. The scene is brightly lit, suggesting daylight.

Our Health is not for sale!

April 7 is the World Health Day. Its the day chosen by Health users and workers, citizen collectives, trade unions and NGOs to demonstrate against Health commodification.

In several European countries, but also elsewhere, we will denounce the commercialisation and privatisation of Health (and social protection) because they are a threat for the access of people to quality healthcare.

Today, due to the national and european policies implemented these last decades, always more firms, often transnational, share the benefits of what is call the « Health market ». Meanwhile, many structures treating the population lack of financial ressources. Our governments continue to sell our Health when negotiating free-trade agreements as TTIP or TiSA.

Let's defend our Health and all healthcare services from the rapacity of transnational corporations !

On April 7, if you want to amplify this message, hang a white sheet on your windows.

Use the hashtag #Health4All if you post pictures on facebook, twitter o others. Thank you !